GOV'T PRESSES PRIVATE LINES INTO PACIFIC SERVICE

Regular Transport Service To China Has Been Exhausted

FOR USE OF MARINES

Americans Will Also Be Returned to U. S. in This Manner

WASHINGTON, Apr. 7 (I.N.S.).—Passenger lines will be utilized by the Government to return those Americans from China that wish to come home, and also to transport the regiment of marines now mobilizing at San Diego to China.

Arrangements have been completed between the Government and Pacific lines for "emergency facilities." It was said at the Navy Department today. These arrangements were necessary because the Government has exhausted its regular transport service by the quick dispatch of thousands of marines to the Far East.

The transport Henderson is sailing from San Diego today with the re-created Sixth Marines. The transport Chaumont is now on the other side, having transported a regiment. The Chateau Thierry is unavailable for immediate service and the Thomas is said to be similarly unavailable.

The Dollar liner President Pierce is to sail from Shanghai on Saturday, and aboard will be approximately 300 refugees, mostly missionaries, who desire to return to the United States. Other arrangements perfected, other Dollar and Pacific Mail liners will be made available for those who wish to get out of China, and for whom the Government has no transportation facilities.

Orders have been issued for the movement of the so-called Third Expeditionary Force of Marines, now assembling at San Diego, to China within the next ten days. A tentative sailing date has been fixed for April 15.

Bill In Amended Form Goes
To the Governor After Unanimous Vote

ADVANCE OTHER BILLS

HARRISBURG, Apr. 7.—The administration bill for the mandatory opening of ballot boxes will be on its way to Governor Fisher's desk today.

The House, weary after its most strenuous day of the session, passed the measure by a listless vote of 192 to 0 last evening. It already had passed the Senate.

Omission of a word in the final Senate draft, however, caused a minor house amendment in which the upper chamber is expected to concur early in today's session. It will then be sent to the Governor.

There was no debate to precede the House action. Few members answered their names as the clerk called the roll, and the unanimous vote was announced under the traditional legislative assumption here that silence gives consent.

Many of the members hurried from the Chamber immediately after the "vote" to attend the birthday anniversary dinner to Senator Max G. Leslie, Pittsburgh, who was one of the leading opponents of the measure.

The bill, expected to become a law in a few days, will compel Common Pleas Judges to open the ballot box of the ward in which the precinct is located alleging fraud. As presented to the Senate by the Governor, it would have permitted the petitioners to be electors residing in any part of the county and would have made recounts compulsory on charges of error as well.

The party leaders caused its amendment in the Senate to eliminate the word "error" from the petition's allegations and to limit the petitioners to voters of the election precinct or contiguous divisions. Governor Fisher objected to these amendments, and forced the compromise after calling more than half the members of the Legislature to his office.

Under the final draft of the measure, the petitioners will be compelled to post a $50 cash or $200 bond forfeit with $50 to be lost if fraud or "substantial error" is not proven by the recount.

At the same session, the House advanced to third reading and the final action calendar the remaining six ballot reform measures to be passed by the 1927 Legislature. Two of them were the other administration election bills, which have been made a special order of business in the lower chamber next Monday night.

They are designed to restrict assistance to voters, with organization amendments, and to eliminate "dissemination of information" as a legal campaign expenditure.

The fourth Fisher ballot reform bill, which would have limited primary campaign expenditures to ten cents a voter at the preceding general election, is dead in Senate committee under the Mellon-Fisher compromise.

The other bills, all having administration approval, are the Harris Constitutional amendment providing local option on the use of voting machines, two Harris measures eliminating the age-disqualification requirement at registration in first, second and third class cities, and the Bonbrake resolution creating a commission to study and codify existing and proposed ballot laws.

House action on the mandatory opener followed two attempts to pry other ballot bills from committee. They were the Davis bill to make use of voting machines mandatory throughout the State and the Zak bills replacing fines with prison terms for election law violators.

"MISS BOB WHITE" IS ATTRACTIVE MUSICAL COMEDY TO BE GIVEN BY BRISTOL H. S. STUDENTS

Story Deals With Adventures of Two Young Millionaires
Who Made and Lost Election Bet and Have To Masquerade As Tramps for Two Months

"MISS Bob White!" What an attractive name! At first it might suggest a few shrill notes from the tiny throat of a warbler, but the notes suggested are nothing compared to what the choruses are predicted to bring forth.

This catchy musical comedy will be staged in the Colonial Theatre on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, April 21st and 22nd, under the direction of a representative of the John B. Rogers Producing Company.

The story deals with the adventures of two young millionaires, who have made and lost a freak election bet and as a consequence are compelled to masquerade as tramps for two months. Incidentally they suffer the hardships usually attributed to genuine "knights of the road." The two adventurers take refuge on the farm of an old Quaker who compels them to work for their sustenance. The fiancée of one of the two unfortunate, hearing of the predicament, seeks employment as a milkmaid at the same farm, and in disguise forces from her future husband a declaration of love.

The first act shows Friend Rodd's farm; the second, the kitchen in Friend Rodd's house; and the third depicts the Billions' country seat. The time is the present.

The cast of characters in order of their appearance is here given:

Lord Bashful, of the nobility, Albert Elsbree; Friend Rodd, Quaker farmer, Ronald Swain; Phyllis, daughter of Friend Rodd, Mary Wurster; Jack Kearny, a sailor in love with Phyllis, Leslie Strunfels; Miss Autumn, Edith Bergey; Duke High Ties, Lester

Slatoff; Artie Tre Billion and Billie Van Million, millionaires, who are forced by losing the election bet to become tramps, James Paulmier and Marvin McEuen, respectively; Maggie, a maid, Ruth Schweikert; Claire Livingston, "Bob White," Florence Peirce; O'Yankemin, the village police force, Clinton Smith.

Rehearsals are being held each day at the high school building, and the students are eager for the time of presentation to come. Miss Vivian Taylor, of the producing company, is director.

There are many tuneful songs and clever dance numbers throughout the three acts of "Miss Bob White," and as one of the members of the cast remarked today, "the choruses are just splendid. They are really better than in the previous productions."

In each act a different scene is presented, and the costumes will be new and clever.

The personnel of some of the choruses are as follows:

Colonial Dances—Anna Werner, Adeline Wirt, Ruth Walker, Lena Giannacova, Margaret Hendricks, Carolyn Sell, Lucie Randolph, Margaret Neill, Anna Niccol, Virginia Young, Anna Burton, Mary Sagolla.

DAILY NEWS LETTER

By Alice Langeller

(I. N. S. "Staff Correspondent")
PARIS, April 7.—Seemingly to step right out of an old fairy-tale, a tiny little princess has come to Paris from the Far East. It is the Princess of Afghanistan, the daughter of the Ameer, not clothed in fine silks and satins and wearing pearls and rubies, but dressed just like all smart Parisian children, with little half-socks and bobbed hair.

Sultane Djan is only seven years old and is probably the first little woman of her race to make the long journey across mountains, deserts and sea. She came with her grandfather, Monsieur Tarzi, former Afghan minister to Paris and her father's sister, Princess Cobra. Her father, who now calls himself King Amanullah, has been modernizing Afghanistan for the past eight years, and this trip is an expression of his father's desire to have Afghanistan benefit by the best of Western civilization all the while maintaining its independence.

When the young king came to the throne after the assassination of his father, woman occupied her usual inferior position. He established schools for women and tried to make their lives more pleasant. Certain Moslem tribes were much stirred over this, revolted, and the schools were closed. But King Amanullah continued to fight for his cause and finally obtained a ruling from high Mohammedan authorities to allow the education of women and the schools were opened up again.

The little Princess will remain in the capital about six months, seeing all that she can with her soft black eyes, perfecting her French and making her first contact with Western civilization. She is a little bewildered by the fast taxis in the crowded streets, and thinks that the French dolls are just about the nicest things that even a fairy could make.

MARBLE CONTESTS WILL BE A FEATURE OF BOYS' WEEK HERE

Ward Leaders To Select Six Best Players From Their Districts

TO PLAY THREE GAMES

This Will Decide the Championship For Each Of The Wards

One of the most interesting contests which will be held in connection with Boys' Week, will be the "Marble Tournament." Most every boy knows the game, and judging from the interest already shown all over town, the contest this year will be more interesting than ever.

The tournament committee of which N. B. Bertelette is chairman, has issued instructions, announcing the dates on which the contests are to be held and the prizes to be awarded.

Conditions governing the 1927 marble tournament will be as follows: The various ward leaders shall determine and select the six best marble players in each of their respective wards for playing in this event and the tournament will be held as follows: The six entrants from each ward will play the best out of three games and as the result of which the ward champion marble player will be determined.

The ward champions will be awarded an extra large Boy Scout knife and the ward winners are to enter the semi-finals on the following Thursday.

Ward champions of the first, third and fifth wards will play in one ring and ward champions of the second, fourth and sixth wards will play together in another ring, the best out of three games to determine the two winners for the finals. Immediately thereafter the two entrants for the finals will play the best out of three games to determine the Bristol marble champion who will be awarded a suitably engraved silver cup.

All entrants for the events on both days must report for roll call to commence play promptly at 4 p. m. Any entrant not answering roll call will be disqualified from the contest.

All games will be played on Leedom's Tennis Courts on Beaver street near Walnut street. No one but those playing and the officials will be allowed on the playing field and all players are requested to wear sneakers or tennis shoes so as to not dig up the courts.

—Miss May Slater, of Mansion street, is confined to her home suffering with an attack of pleurisy.

Other valuable documents on exhibition are the original treaty ending her war with Spain, the warrant for the arrest of Fouquet, the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes and, most important of all, a little notebook with the last celebrated words of the "Grand Roy": "Mon fils, j'ai trop aime a guerre" (My son, I loved war too much).

Gaston Doumergue, President of the French Republic, is a bachelor and of course one of France's most eligible bachelors. Scarcely a day passes when the postman neglects to bring in a number of marriage offers from pretty, young and rich women. Recently, one came in from an American, and read: "Monsieur le President."

"I am thirty years old. I am young, intelligent and very beautiful and have refused marriage offers from many of the most aristocratic men."

"Just lately I read that you are still unmarried and I decided—we do this in America—to ask you to marry me. I have eleven million dollars dowry. Here is my photograph. Answer me as soon as possible."

It is said that the President smiled, looked at the photograph and tore up the letter.

A charming little village in France has just died. Roquebilliere, which is not very far distant from Nice and Monte Carlo, was half destroyed last November by an avalanche which buried a large number of houses and twenty inhabitants. Those who remained were obliged to evacuate to a safer part of the town and a watch service kept day and night to give warning.

A second great mountain of earth and rocks recently descended upon Roquebilliere, destroying the few houses which were left, and some which had been repaired.

PASSING OF AN INSTITUTION

The country store is passing. It is going to join the covered wagon, the town pump and the ox team. Thousands of them still keep their old estate, but in other thousands glittering fixtures, plate glass showcases, gilt cash registers and steam heat have supplanted the wood stove, the upended nail kegs, the cracker barrel and the dry goods box handy for the whittler's blade.

With its mingled smells of new rope, kerosene, yellow soap, coffee, cheese, plug cut and calico the country store is an institution as American as green corn and apple pie. If it is the will of the ruthless gods of commerce to destroy this institution it will be to the great loss and with the great regret of the vast rural population of the nation.

What the department store is to the city the cross roads general store has been to the country. It has the compendiums of the wants of man. It has been even more than that, for through it the farmer and his good wife were able to convert butter and eggs into shoes and sealing wax.

What the club is to the city the general store has been to the country. The country store has been the forum and intellectual arena of a large area of this broad country. These countless centers for rustic gathering have been the fountainheads of those rivulets of politics and opinion that joined themselves into irresistible floods of national opinion.

Rural America is in process of transformation and every step in that process brings nearer to obsolescence the country store of song and story, of the jester's fling and the cartoonist's pencil. The hot-dog stand, roadside garage and tea house are aiding in the extermination but can never take the place of this pioneer institution.

LESSON OF LIFE

Every person should go to the cemetery at least twice in life. Once at the end of life, and first early in life to reflect on the brevity of life and the insufficiency of worldly goods. There is no place like a quiet churchyard for meditation and there is room in every life for more serious thought.

The tombstones hold a moral for all living. There is inscribed the human virtues, but among the inscriptions there is no record of estates left behind, fortunes made and spent and worldly fame attained. The magnitude and sculpture of the stone or the vault alone remain to remind the world of "the boast of heraldry and the pomp of power."

Why should human beings worry and struggle through life's fleet span in pursuit of wealth, fame, luxuries, vanities and all those other evanescent things we choose to call riches? The poor are distressed by too little money, the moderately wealthy by the thought that others possess more wealth than they, and the rich by too much money.

Few people have learned the secret of living well. Most of us measure contentment in terms of dollars and social position. The number is negligible which views life as a golden opportunity to work and think and be joyful.

As to the much-praised art, he doesn't produce. Anybody could enjoy industry if it consisted in taking.

"Marital vacation" is euphonious term for whichever it be, whether a temporary or permanent separation.

SYNOPSIS

John Ballard, left poor by the same fate that deprived him of his parents, works his way through college, then devotes his law career to fighting negligent railroads, cherishing a vendetta against them for killing his parents. Phil Hardin, a college chum, now President of the local railroad, tried to entice him to join the road's staff, but John refused. John loved Viola Ruskin, but through curious misunderstandings, she married Phil. Jordan, money king behind the railroad, warns John not to become an enemy; but after ten years, John is district attorney.

What John was reading was the account of a tragic and disastrous wreck—a wreck on the N. Y. and C. V. R. R. within the city limits themselves. In the morgue lay a dozen bodies, victims of the smash; in the hospitals of the city half a hundred more maimed and crippled passengers lay, some of them dying. The report was calm, dispassionate.
Rails had spread. Old, outworn rails that should have been replaced long since; rails the defects in which adequate inspection must have revealed. Old, outworn signals had failed, so that into the derelict freight train that the bad rails had wrecked a passenger train had dashed. Steel coaches would have stood the shock the old, crazy wooden cars actually in use had crumpled into blazing ruin, while the steel Pullmans had been untouched. Those passengers rich enough to ride in the Pullmans were unhurt; it was the poor folk, in the coaches, who made up the long list of dead and injured.

A clerk opened Ballard's door; stood respectfully.
"Well," said John.
"Mr. Warren, sir, to see you. He says he has no appointment."
"I know. Never mind that. Show him in. Ask anyone with whom I have appointments this morning to excuse me—say matters of grave and immediate importance have come up."

Warren came in, his face sober, his manner grave.
"Well, Ballard?" he said. "This is the worst yet."
John nodded.
"Very much the worst. And—the first in my jurisdiction."
"Exactly," said the editor. "I take it you will move?"
"I have moved already. I have investigators at the scene of the wreck. The railway people tried to bar them—I have ordered the police to stop any interference with my men. I expect to go to the grand jury tomorrow and ask for the indictment of every responsible official of the road for manslaughter."
Warren whistled between his teeth.
"Whew!" he said. "That's going pretty far, isn't it?"
"What else is there to do? I could say murder and not be going too far. Warren, there is no use in half-way measures now. Jordan and the others in the road have no consciences. They have given ample proof of that. They have had plenty of warning. This is only one of a series of accidents that could have been prevented had the physical condition of the N. Y. and C. V. been properly kept up. The management of the road has been denounced again and again in the press. The time has come for stern measures—and I shall take them."

"You're right, of course," said Warren after a moment. "I have not meant to question that. It's only—I'm wondering whether to go so far may not defeat your own ends."
"I think not," said John. "After all—what else could I do? To make threats is useless—that's been proved. The Public Service Commission has done that—with no results at all."
"Jordan owns the governor. The Public Service Commission knows that Jordan can have every member of it removed from office at his first word."

"Exactly. No. This is our chance, Warren. We'll have public opinion behind us now. They've gone too far. I don't mean, of course, to suggest that they anticipated anything as ghastly as this wreck. But—knowing the danger, they went ahead. They're good enough railroad men. They knew exactly what risks they were running. Their eyes were open. I've ample proof that they've been warned again and again. I know that reports have been made to the executive offices, reports that predicted just what has happened."
"The road is rotten from end to end. Its rails are unsafe. Its bridges are antiquated—every important bridge on the system needs strengthening to carry the heavy loads that are being hauled now. The whole signal system is worn out and dangerous—it might break down at any point as it broke down here last night. These things were known to Hardin and all the operating officials of the road. And still they went ahead. Half a million dollars spent in the last year would have made this particular wreck impossible. Yet rather than spend that money—and more than that is wasted every three months in the administration of the road—they allowed these passengers, who had trusted them, to go to their deaths!"

"Oh, I know—I know!" said Warren. "You're right. But it's going to be a fight, John."
"I know that—and I'm ready. I've been getting ready for this, or something like it, for a long time. I was beginning to get ready even before I was elected. I've anticipated it ever since I came into this room for the first time."
"Well—we'll be behind you to the limit—be sure of that," said Warren. "Go slow, though, John—don't make any move without being sure of your ground. And—take care of yourself."

"What do you mean?"
"Exactly what I say. Take care of yourself. Don't go out alone at night. Have someone sleep in your apartment."
John laughed.
"Good Lord!" he said. "You don't mean you think I'd make an attempt to put me out of the way?"
"I certainly do mean exactly that. These people will stop at nothing if you really frighten them—and you will. Man alive—do you realize that if you push this thing through some of the men concerned are likely to go to jail?"
John's mouth was a grim line.
"They're going to jail if I can put them there!" he said.
"Then mark what I say—and act on it. Take care of yourself. Your life will be in danger the moment they know what you are really trying to do. That's not melodrama—it's a sober statement of something I am absolutely convinced of. Jordan is utterly without conscience or scruple—and Hardin is his tool."

"I'm going to see Hardin," said John.
"You are? Do you think that wise?"
"If you mean do I think it will do any good—I don't know. But I must see him and give him a chance to save himself. He can, if he will take the chance. And—we are old friends. Rather, we were."

"It's for you to decide," said Warren after a moment of hesitation. "I see your point. You and Hardin were in college together, were you not?"
"Yes. I—Warren, I can't explain, but you'll have to take my word for it. I owe it to my conscience to give Hardin a chance to disassociate himself from Jordan and the others. I can save him, if he will come through and tell the truth. I must give him the opportunity to do it."

"I'll take your word for anything. But—you're dealing with a man who seems to me as treacherous and as dangerous as a snake."
"Perhaps he is—I'm not certain yet. I know he's weak—and every weak man is dangerous. But I'm almost certain that he is simply Jordan's tool—that he has been wholly under Jordan's influence. I think he is weak rather than vicious."
"I've usually found it came to the same thing, so far as practical results went," said Warren. "Personally, I'm not sure I wouldn't rather deal with an out and out crook than a weak man with decent instincts who let himself be led astray. With the real crook you stand at least know where you stand."

"I'll know where I stand with Hardin after I've talked with him for five minutes," said John. He glanced at his watch. "I'm going to see him now."

He was as good as his word. He walked across the square to the imposing offices of the N. Y. and C. V. R. R. Here all was confusion and excitement. But the announcement of his name brought a prompt response; President Hardin would be glad to see him.

GOOD FRIEND

"There's a deep sort of joy that we all understand;

In the ring of a voice and the clasp of a hand;

In the warmth of a smile that is friendly and true;

And the comforting charm of a good friend like you."

One reason there is so much humor in the world is because there are so many persons who take themselves seriously.

The good bird dogs die young; the sorry ones have as many lives as a cat.

The person who reads most discovers the most plagiarizers.

"A burglar broke into my place last night."

"Did he get anything?"

"Rather! You see, my wife thought it was me!"

Smith, the druggist, had lost his wife—she ran away with another man, so he inserted the following in the newspapers: "This is to notify the man who so kindly relieved me of my wife, that I can supply him with liniment, arnica, salve, bandages, absorbent cotton, iodine, sleeping powder and crutches at very low prices."

Many a man gets a reputation for being good-natured because he is too timid to stand up for his rights.

A girl may have a mind as keen as a razor's edge, but if her stockings wrinkle at the ankles no one will listen to her.

Woman is capable of a great love, but of only a small friendship.

Jobson and his young wife were having their first quarrel.

"I wish I was dead," she sobbed.

"I wish I was, too!" he exclaimed.

"Then I don't wish I was!"—and the war continued.

Observation About Events, Persons and Things of General Interest.

Gazing upon the site where once stood the old Forge bridge will give one a thrill during these days.

All is hustle and bustle. To some the work might suggest nothing but drudgery, dirt and long hours—but to me the whole enterprise seems as a piece of music—a selection that actually sings of another step in the transformation of Bristol.

The network of steel forms the bars of the song, with the mortar blending all together.

And the very pound-pound of the pile-driver would seem as the minor notes in this song of IMPROVEMENT—the tones of the concrete mixer and the creaking of the wheel-barrows as they are pushed up the inclines have their place in the scale—with the sound of the voices of busy men blending in.

The occasional staccato notes are furnished by the hammers as they play upon the framework. And augmenting the deeper notes are the higher pitched keys of the boys and girls as they shrill in glee at a portion of the work completed or when a new piece of machinery is set in motion.

The writing of a musical composition that will last through Time, means that the composer must put his best—heart and soul—into the melody. The quality of the work depends upon the blending of each note; and so as each note—or step in the new enterprise—follows each other in correct succession, the harmony of movement can do but one thing—create a masterpiece that will last through the years.

TEX RICKARD INSISTS UPON GATE OF $1,400,000

By Davis J. Walsh

I. N. S. Sports Editor
NEW YORK, April 7.—Tex Rickard, the big sock and belt man, is insisting upon a minimum gate of $1,400,000 for his world's heavyweight championship fight this summer; it was learned today, under pain of leaving New York holding the old gunny sack when the time for the pay off comes. There has been some idle converse of late days about the Tunney shot being dropped down in Philadelphia again and my information today was that this end of the transaction is just about as definite as a called third strike.

It is all a matter of elementary addition and subtraction and Rickard has a singular aversion to the latter except as applied to the customers.

After scaling the prices at the Yankee Stadium five different ways with his ticket man, Mike Jacobs, it is said that subtraction is the inevitable penalty if he goes through with the fight at the local park.

The best he could hope for at the Stadium, it seems, is a maximum gate of $950,000 and a crowd of 80,000. The latter, as such, might be considered fair enough if Rickard could have the purse taken off the $2 and $3 customers but it seems that New York must have its cut price witnesses at these affairs of the fist and this fact is making it increasingly difficult for Rickard to have his profits.

As the polls were closing, it wasn't quite established in my mind which of these two projects was less important, since the cut price witness can stay away in droves to the detriment of no one and Rickard can always turn to hog calling if fight promotion begins to lag.

In this case, however, he is under contract to Gene Tunney to deliver the bullion at the appointed hour and some gentlemen, very large and loose in their ways, have gone so far as to admit that Tunney has been guaranteed a sum aggregating $850,000. Still I have the law with me when I say that I disbelieve this with much emotion; in fact, my understanding is that Tunney signed for $450,000 flat, which is an odd way of putting it, and fifty per cent. of all receipts over a million dollars, which will be ample, sufficient and enough if the fight is held in the Philadelphia stadium.

There doesn't seem to be any doubt that this will be done, provided Philadelphia is willing; of course, Philadelphia might be unwilling and then it may be that carbolic acid is being recommended as a gargle.

Anyhow, as I remember it, Rickard's last venture in Philadelphia grossed nearly two million dollars, of which the town itself took more than $100,000 to say nothing of the prestige involved, and if this isn't worth a return engagement, to all parties concerned, you might as well start wheeling up the padded cell, for in that case I can't be responsible for broken bones except contracted by myself.

What Is a Diuretic?

People Are Learning the Value of Occasional Use.

EVERYONE knows that a laxative stimulates the bowels. A diuretic performs a similar function to the kidneys. Under the strain of our modern life, our organs are apt to become sluggish and require assistance. More and more people are learning to use Doan's Pills, occasionally, to insure good elimination which is so essential to good health. More than 50,000 grateful users have given Doan's signed recommendations. Scarcely a community but has its representation. Ask your neighbor!

UNDER THE CAPITAL DOME

HARRISBURG, Pa., Apr. 7 (I.N.S.)—Representative C. Miller, of Luzerne county, has introduced a bill in the house providing for the payment of $10,000 to Mrs. Emma Cartwright, widow of the late Solomon Cartwright, who was killed September 29, 1925, by an explosion in the engine room of the capitol.

Water supply conditions in the Delaware, Lehigh and Schuylkill rivers soon will be studied in a survey to be conducted by the Public Service Commission. The survey will include the conservation and distribution of the available water supply sources in the three rivers.

Rep. Aaron B. Hess, of Lancaster, is sponsor of a bill in the house to prevent the placing of direction signs within 100 feet of a highway right-of-way.

James L. Stuart, secretary of highways, has been asked to improve the Perry highway between Pittsburgh and Erie. A delegation of western Pennsylvanians recently waited upon the highway secretary to obtain his promise for the improvement. The delegation also sought Governor Fisher's support in the project.

The application of the Sunbury Inter-County Bridge Company to construct a bridge from Sunbury to the Snyder county shore over the Susquehanna river has been listed for hearing before the Public Service Commission here May 2. Opposition to the application has been made by the Sunbury Bridge Company which owns the present toll structure over the river at that point.

Piles of defeated and junked bills in the present session of the legislature have begun to accumulate in the corridors of the capitol outside the rooms of the house and senate sergeant-at-arms. These hundreds of bills which have been printed during the session for the use of legislative members will be sold to waste paper dealers at the end of the session.

Governor Fisher has signed three bills passed in this session of the legislature to create new judgeships. The last bill signed was that of Sen. James E. Norton, of Berks county, providing for a third common pleas judge in that county. The two other judgeships creating bills were for Philadelphia and Lawrence counties. So far there has been no appointment for either of the three places.

A bill introduced in the senate would make the blossom of the tulip tree the state flower. It is understood that a bill also will be introduced for the naming of a state song.

The Public Charities Association of Pennsylvania has sent letters of thanks to Senator Augustus F. Daix, Jr., Philadelphia, and Representative Helen Grimes, of Allegheny, for their work in connection with the child marriage bill, which establishes the minimum marriageable age for both sexes in this state at sixteen. The bill has passed both houses of the legislature and has been sent to Governor Fisher for approval. Under the old common law of Pennsylvania the minimum marriageable age was twelve for girls and fourteen for boys, with parental consent up to age twenty-one. No change is made in parental consent age in the Grimes-Daix bill.

The Public Service Commission on April 22 will hear arguments on the application of the Reading Transportation Company to incorporate. The Reading Company is seeking the privilege of operating bus routes in twenty-four counties of the state by forming the subsidiary company.

State News

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Apr. 7 (I.N.S.)—The Kittochinny Historical Society of Franklin County is expected to commemorate Franklin County events with the erection of three markers. A marker will be placed at the Courthouse in Chambersburg in tribute to Benjamin Franklin, after whom the county was named. Another marker will be placed east of Chambersburg to mark the site where the first slave was sold in the Cumberland Valley, and the third will be on the Lincoln Highway east of here to mark the site of the headquarters of General Lee while on his way to Gettysburg just before the battle at the latter city.

Recommendations in the election of the markers were accepted by the historical society at a meeting held at the Anthony Wayne Hotel, Waynesboro. The society has elected these officers: President, J. L. Pinafrock, Mercersburg; vice-president, J. G. Benedict, Waynesboro; Secretary, Arthur W. Gillan, Chambersburg; treasurer, J. E. D. Omwake, Green castle.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Apr. 7 (I.N.S.)—Forest fires during 1926 cost the people of Pennsylvania $3,250 for each day in the year in damages, of which the State Department of Forests and Waters estimated the cost.

How To Heal Leg Sores

If you suffer from Leg Sores or Venose Ulcers, I will send you absolutely FREE a copy of my famous book that tells how to be rid of these troubles for all time by using my complete home treatment. It is different from anything you ever heard of, and the result of over 35 years specializing. Simply send your name and address to Dr. H. J. WHITTIER, Suite 634, 421 East 11th Street, Kansas City, Mo. (Adv.)

In making public a resume of forest fire damages and the cost of extinguishing the department showed that there has been a steady increase in the amount of damage from fire since 1923. Not only this but there has been an almost equally steady advance in the cost of fighting the fires in the state.

Last year saw the highest damage loss of any year since 1913 the figures showed. The total damage last year was $1,186,326.65 in addition to which it cost $177,353.41 to extinguish the fires.

The highest previous loss from the forest fires was in 1920 when the damage amounted to $1,707,868.30. In that year it cost the state $43,195.97 to extinguish the fires, the statistics in the department showed.

In 1923 the largest area since 1913 was burned over by fires. The acreage destroyed by fire in that year was 375,737.11 acres. Last year the acreage burned was only 224,255.60.

The chief fire warden announced that there were a total of 2,917 fires in the state last year. The record high was established in 1922 when there were 3,433 fires.

Last year the average acreage destroyed by each fire was 76.87 as compared with the high record of 412 acres per fire in 1913.

The lowest fire loss recorded in the state came in 1914 when damage was estimated at only $204,296.60.

In 1913 there were 937 fires reported. These fires burned over 386,267.55 acres of timber lands and did destruction estimated at $719,426.67. The cost of extinguishing the fires in 1913 was only $26,683.33.

NATURAL TOBACCO TASTE means the pure taste of the tobaccos themselves . . . with all their own natural spiciness and mellowness brought to full natural perfection.
